

Do you find deep, almost spiritual satisfaction in turning chaos into cleanliness? Does the sight of a freshly scrubbed toilet bowl glistening under fluorescent lights make your heart skip a beat? We're looking for a fearless guardian of hygiene, a warrior against dust, grime, and mysterious sticky spots—someone who understands that a mop is not just a tool, but a calling. If you take pride in transforming questionable spaces into places people can enter without holding their breath, and you're not afraid to confront whatever unspeakable horrors lurk in the restroom at 3 p.m., then congratulations: your oddly specific talents may finally have a home.